A&E plan stalled

Fears of extra pressure on QE hospital eased
by court ruling

The Royal Borough of Greenwich has joined local campaigners in welcoming a High Court ruling that the planned shake-up of local health services was "unlawful".

The proposals to cut maternity and A&E services at Lewisham hospital followed the South London Healthcare Trust being put into administration.

But the judge, Mr Justice Silber, ruled the measures should never have been recommended in the first place.

The Department of Health immediately announced it would appeal the decision.

Concerns were initially raised at a series of public meetings last year, when Matthew Kershaw, the South London Healthcare Trust administrator first proposed the plans.

Responding to the court ruling, Cllr Chris Roberts, leader of the Royal Borough of Greenwich said: "Along with local residents, the council was very concerned as to whether there would be sufficient capacity at Queen Elizabeth hospital to cope with the extra demand that would have arisen as a result of

Over-the-top traffic calming is a sign of our times

Star Letter

LOVELY SYMMETRY...but is this many signs OTT?

THIS photo of a new traffic calming island in Ormiston Road, SE10, shows an extreme example of street sign clutter. Is this the most over-the-top traffic calming eyesore anywhere in the Royal Borough of Greenwich? The seven foot width restriction sports no less than two islands, six posts, four lights, two bollards (striped) and twelve separate signs: a different set of signs/notices from those shown in the photo can be seen on the opposite side of the restriction. All this in a quiet residential road where most people have had no serious concerns about traffic. The council's stated reason for the works is to deter heavy lorries speeding past Halstow school in the next road. But since traffic still passes the school from many other approaches, this seems doomed to failure. Our main grief is that, although some form of consultation was carried out, we were never shown a final design. It is difficult to believe anyone could have agreed to the finished construction had they seen it in advance - even those few households in Ormiston Road who voted in favour of the proposed restriction (we are told it was 11). Might we ask those in charge if they considered the following advice from the Department of Transport? 'For new schemes, the aim should be to avoid clutter. Authorities should consult fully on the details of sign design so that residents can comment on their appropriateness and placing.'

We hope this is not the start of a trend with similar eyesores going up elsewhere.

Oona Chantrel, Greenwich
● THE Ormiston Road width restriction is designed to comply with Department for Transport signs standards. Designs for the signs were included in the consultation document given to residents in January. The council agrees that road signs can be environmentally intrusive and it tries to reduce clutter where problems are identified. Because of this the DfT is reviewing national road signage and hopefully this will result in boroughs setting local sign design standards so they can meet the needs of local people.

Why is Eltham being ignored?

I have just received my copy of GT (July 30 edition) and was very disappointed to see SE9 parks have not been included in the Summer Parks 2013 activities for young people. Yet again the council ignores this side of the royal borough. Why?

Janis Newman, Eltham

● CHILDREN'S services replies: "When we commissioned our youth services, we asked young people about what, when and where the provision should be. The feedback was that they wanted high quality activities which reflected their interests, and that they were prepared to travel to activities that they enjoy. Evidence from last year's summer programme showed that more than 70 young people living in Eltham took part in activities not located in Eltham and 58 young people not living in Eltham attended activities in the south of the borough."

the proposals to close the A&E at Lewisham.

"We welcome the fact that the planned merger of the Queen Elizabeth and Lewisham hospitals will still go ahead, as will the measures to write off a large part of the trust's debt. We now look forward to working with the government, local clinicians and our local community in order to ensure that residents can continue to access the health services that they need and deserve."

However, a Department of Health spokesman stated they were considering their options following the judge's decision.

He said, "This judgment applies to one aspect of a package of changes which we believe are in the best long-term interests of patients and the public across south east London."

"As it stands, the South London Healthcare NHS Trust has been running at a loss of about £1million a week - money that has to be diverted from frontline patient care. We expect to continue other elements of that package of changes, including the dissolution of the South London Healthcare NHS Trust, planned for October 1.

"Experience in south-east London certainly suggests that it can be necessary for changes to be made at more than one trust in order to find a sustainable service model. That's why we are appealing the decision, and considering our further options carefully."

Queen's award for people of Greenwich

Accolade for borough's role in London Olympics

THE people of Royal Greenwich have been given a prestigious award to recognise their support in hosting the equestrian events for London 2012.

The Queen's Award for Equestrianism was presented to the royal borough leader last Friday - a year on from the Games - by Lord Lieutenant of West Sussex on behalf of the Queen.

The award is usually presented to an individual for outstanding services to equestrianism. But this year it was felt a whole community deserved the accolade.

Residents were praised for their enthusiasm for horse sport and for welcoming London 2012 equestrian events to Greenwich Park which helped to make it a major feature of the Games - raising the profile of the sport around the world.

British Horse Society Chairman Claire Aldridge said: "We are passionate about encouraging new people to experience the benefits of riding. There will be few greater showcases for our sport than the events of last summer. It was so important for equestrian sport to be an integral part of the London Games - and without the outstanding generosity of the people of Greenwich this would not have been possible."

Since the Games, the royal borough has also led in establishing Hadlow College, an equestrian training centre in the borough where local people can follow tailor-made courses for careers with horses.

Receiving the award on behalf of residents, council leader Chris Roberts said: "I am honoured and delighted to accept this prestigious award on behalf of the people of Greenwich."

"I am so grateful to those in the equestrian community and in LOCOG who had the original vision to choose Greenwich Park as the venue for the Olympic and Paralympic Games. For Greenwich, a major focus of our Games legacy will stem from the growth in tourism. The equestrian events resulted in Greenwich being called 'the undisputed star of the Games' which showcased our borough in a manner even we did not fully envisage. The Games will live long in the memories of all those who witnessed the events and we are so proud to have been honoured in this way."

Make merry at Asian mela

'BRINGING communities together' is the theme of this year's Asian Mela this weekend. It takes place in General Gordon Square, on Sunday August 11 from 11am to 5pm. Two thousand people are expected to the event which aims to celebrate diversity and encourage local communities to live in harmony. The festival will celebrate Asian culture with a lively programme of entertainments, under the big screen including celebrity performances, live music, songs and dances from South Asian communities. There will also be Asian food stalls, ethnic, charity stalls and health stalls along with children's activities and entertainments. The event has been organised by the Asian Festival Committee, a not-for-profit organisation that supports community initiatives to tackle poverty and bad health.

New workshops help pupils move to big school

by Dick Townsend-Smith

THOUSANDS of 11-year-olds are getting a helping hand with the A-Z of secondary school before the start of the new term next month.

As they leave the cosy familiarity of their primary school and friends, they will suddenly become the newest and youngest in a new school, with different teachers for different subjects, and expected to take on more responsibility for themselves.

The royal borough's secondary schools already hold familiarisation days over the summer holidays, so new pupils can get an idea of what to expect. New this year are workshops run by the royal borough to give pupils a better idea of how to cope with the new challenges and demands on them. About 40 children whose teachers felt they would benefit the most were invited to take part.

Included are sessions on road safety, how to build confidence, make new friends, deal with conflict, and cope with change.

The week-long workshops, called Stepping Up, take place at St Paul's Academy in Finchale Road, Abbey Wood. Films are shown about the dangers of drugs and how to deal with peer pressure. Qualified professionals are leading the workshops to help pupils feel confident and safe about their new school, make new friends early on, and learn how to cope with making the move.

SHARING CONCERNS: 11-year-olds Chelsea Morse from Charlton, Denise Adabra from Thamesmead, Sahid Kamara from Shooters Hill, and Shane Hennell from Abbey Wood

Children in their first week of Stepping Up gave their verdicts to GT.

Chelsea Morse, 11, from Charlton said: "I'm going to be going to Thomas Tallis, and I've been learning all about teamwork." Sahid Kamara, 11, from Shooters Hill said: "It's good because I've been making friends with some children who are going to St Paul's like me." And Denise Adabra, 11, from Thamesmead said: "We had a competition to make a radio advert about why it's good to go to secondary school, and I won it." Along with Shane Hennell, 11, from Abbey Wood, they worked together to share their concerns about secondary school, talking about how to overcome worries and feelings of nervousness or shyness.

Cllr Jackie Smith, the royal borough's cabinet member for children's services, said: "This scheme is giving children the opportunity to meet others who are going to their new school, and talk together about their concerns and worries about leaving their primary school. We have a very good reputation in this borough for helping children make the transition to senior school, and this project is all part of that."

North Greenwich bus station closure

NORTH Greenwich bus station is closed for around four weeks while essential works are carried out.

The station shut on Sunday (August 3) affecting locations where travellers can catch buses and taxis, as well as disabled parking by the bus station.

TfL's decision to close the station now was taken to minimise inconvenience for passengers and take advantage of reduced passenger numbers during the school holidays and fewer events at the nearby O2 Arena.

During the closure access roads to the station will get extensive repairs and changes will also be made to pedestrian crossings to improve passenger safety.

During the works bus routes 108, 129, 132, 161, 188, 422, 472 and 486 will use nearby stops F and G on Millennium Way. Bus station staff be available to advise passengers of where to catch their bus.

The taxi rank will be relocated from its current location to a temporary pick up area adjacent to East Parkside.

The disabled parking in the NCP car park behind the bus station will be relocated and blue badge holders will be able to park in the North Greenwich station main car park in Edmund Halley Way.

● Full details of the stopping arrangements will be displayed throughout the bus station and at www.tfl.gov.uk

Restaurateur banned and fined

by Dick Townsend-Smith

RESTAURATEUR Ademola Dairo from Thamesmead has been fined a total of £7,000 for food hygiene offences, and banned from managing a food business again.

Dairo, who ran the now closed Marble restaurant in Anglesea Road, Woolwich, was also ordered to do 300 hours unpaid community work for trying to operate his premises as a nightclub without a licence. Magistrates at Bromley also ordered him to pay £5,000 costs after the case was brought by the Royal Borough of Greenwich.

Dairo had denied seven food hygiene offences and another seven for selling alcohol without a licence, but was found guilty on every count.

The court heard that health inspectors found the premises were not kept clean, there was no hot running water for the kitchen sink or for washing hands. There was no pest control or hazard procedures in place, which had resulted in a mouse infestation, the hearing was told. Police and licensing officers had paid several visits to the restaurant following claims that Dairo was opening beyond permitted hours and was selling alcohol without a licence.

They found menus for alcoholic drinks in a basement bar. On another visit, licensing officers found a singer performing live music in the basement, again without a licence.

The court heard that both the police and the council had sent Dairo numerous warnings reminding him that he was not licensed to sell alcohol or provide regulated entertainment, but he ignored them. He had also been cautioned in 2008 for unauthorised activities that needed a licence.

The magistrates were shown photos of filth, mice dropping and safety hazards,

THOUSANDS of people are joining in free sport and keep fit activities one year on from London 2012.

More than a thousand activities take place across Greenwich each day and the royal borough is urging local people to have a go and get active.

They include pastimes from swimming, football cycling and racquet sports to exercise workouts, dance and martial arts.

They've been organised by the royal borough in partnership with other organisations including Charlton Athletic Community Trust and GLL - which runs the borough's leisure centres - to create more opportunities for people to take part in sport as part of the borough's Olympic legacy.

There are activities to suit all ages and abilities and people can even sign up for free motivational support from sporting advisors.

Free taster sessions are also on offer where available to help people get started or try something new.

Three thousand people have already signed up, and another 100 are visiting the website daily to find out more.

"I have been going to the gym at the Arches Leisure Centre for about eight months now and I'm really enjoying it," said Greenwich resident Karen McManus.

"I have lost weight and gained a lot of information about nutrition and diet. I also understand more about food portion control, which has aided my healthier lifestyle."

Cllr John Fahy, the royal borough's cabinet member for healthier communities said:

"Being a host borough for London 2012 has inspired many more people to take part in some form of physical activity."

"This has obvious health benefits but it also impacts on how people feel about themselves - particularly around building confidence and self-esteem. We are encouraging people to try an activity that simply gets them to be a little more active. There are over 1,000 activities available locally in the borough to suit all ages and abilities."

allowed

£7,000 for hygiene offences and were told that Dairo's premises had been shut down by health inspectors on two previous occasions because of serious hygiene concerns. He was convicted in 2011 for six food hygiene offences.

Dairo, defending himself, told the court he was a victim of circumstances and had come to this country to work and never claimed benefits. He said that he believed in hard work and had got the restaurant in 2005 and had no problems to date.

In sentencing him, the magistrates stated they felt that there was a clear health risk if people ate at his restaurant. They said he was not a fit and suitable person to hold a personal licence which allowed him to supply alcohol or manage a food business and ordered his personal licence to be forfeited and prohibited him from managing any food business.

They heard he owned several residential premises and allowed him three months to get his assets in order so he could pay the fines and costs.

Cllr Maureen O'Mara, the royal borough's cabinet member responsible for environmental health, told GT: "We will not hesitate to prosecute any food business which deliberately and persistently ignores advice on hygiene, and put their customers' health at risk."

"The court has handed out a severe penalty to this persistent offender. Food business owners or managers can get free advice at any time from the royal borough's environmental health commercial and licensing teams to help them run their businesses safely and legally."

A police spokesman said: "This result is good example of the effective working relationship between ourselves and partners in the royal borough and demonstrates a joint determination to ensure good customer safety when visiting licensed premises."

Record visitors to Charlton community fayre

AROUND 3,000 people turned out to blow the trumpet for the Horn Fayre. The annual community event in the grounds of Charlton House attracted record crowds despite pessimistic weather forecasts. But the lawn behind Charlton House was bathed in sunshine on Sunday, July 28 and visitors enjoyed live music from Dawson and The Fifth Ace, children's entertainment, food, drink and community stalls. Favourite attractions proved to be the beer tent, children's rides and a dog show which had a record number of entrants with categories including waggiest tail and dog that looks most like its owner! Little Holly Vowles, five, sat behind the wheel of a police van and enjoyed putting on the blue light while five-year-old Isabella Trinh made friends with Chloe the clown. Three-year-old Etham Xin came with mum May Chong who said: "We came last year and had a wonderful time so we were really looking forward to this year." The origins of the fayre date back to the Middle Ages and arose from the selling of horn articles such as beakers, utensils, combs and buttons. It had a had a reputation for being the bawdiest in England - and the owners of the Charlton House pushed back the boundary wall to keep the revellers as far away from the home as possible - the reason the arch stands in the middle of the lawn today. The fayre was banned in 1872 but the tradition was revived by local residents in 1973.

TAKING AIM: youngsters were keen to try out the soft archery

ALL FIRED UP: Amber and Dylan Edwards, top, show off their Olympic torch, while youngsters check out the handball stand

TASTER sports sessions in General Gordon Square have helped to inspire a new generation of athletes. The free events were organised by the royal borough to mark a year on from London 2012. People could have a go at soft archery, handball, cycling, rowing, join Olympic-themed crafts and learn more about the sporting activities on offer across the borough. Most popular with younger residents was the soft archery. Ten-year-old Habib Okedina who plays football for Long Lane FC said: "I've never tried it before and it's quite hard but I'm finding it easier each go I have." Ola Gorecka, ten, told GT: "My mum's into sports and inspires me. I like the archery but I really like swimming and cycling." Hannah Wolverson, 11 and brother Michael, nine, came to the square especially. Recalling London 2012 Hannah said: "I remember the swimming and athletic events the most. I do swimming, tennis and hockey at school." Amber Edwards, and son Dylan, six, made an Olympic torch. She said: "He's really taken a shine to the archery and we're going to look about him joining a club. We're also enquiring about swimming lessons." Details of sporting facilities at www.royalgreenwich.gov.uk/sport

Patients please: Healthwatch to get local launch

PATIENTS are getting a voice through a new Healthwatch programme due to have a formal launch in Greenwich next month. The scheme aims to give patients from the area an opportunity to discuss their health and social care experiences and give feedback on the services.

It's being formally launched in September and is based in the 10 Centre in Greenwich, close to the DLR station.

It's hoped patients' views and opinions will inform the professionals who plan, commission and provide services.

Healthwatch Greenwich manager, Rosaline Mitchell said: "Our vision is to be an effective health-watch that truly reflects the voice of the local people providing evidence-based information to service providers and commissioners in order to improve services for all."

Healthwatch England works with local organisations, national bodies and the government, seeking views from all sections of the community to raise awareness of both the good and bad sides of health care.

There is a launch event on Thursday September 12 from 4 to 6pm at The Gallery at the Woolwich Centre.

Members of the public and corporate partners will have the chance to meet the staff of Healthwatch Greenwich and learn about the work they do.

● For more information on Healthwatch and how to register visit www.healthwatchgreenwich.co.uk or email info@healthwatchgreenwich.co.uk or call 020 8305 5008

Heritage for youngsters

BOREDOM-busting activities are on hand to keep children entertained during the summer holidays at the Greenwich Heritage Centre.

Every Wednesday there's an activity club for 7 to 12-year-olds. The workshops let school-age creatives get busy with arts and crafts, with different theme every week.

An exploration of Vikings kicks off tomorrow (August 7), followed by workshops on the Tudors, Georgians and Victorians.

It's on at the centre on the Woolwich Arsenal every Wednesday until August 28 from 10.30am to 12pm. Places are limited to 20 children per session so booking is recommended.

● Tickets £5 per child. Book on 020 8854 2452, or email heritage.centre@royalgreenwich.gov.uk

Young citizens

St PAUL'S Academy hosted the Greenwich borough's Junior Citizen initiative last month.

The London Fire Service, London Ambulance service, RSPCA and the Police Road safety team along with trading standards and the RLNI and children's services attended the event.

The event encouraged good citizenship, encouraging young people to learn new skills in emergency services and get involved in their local communities through societies and groups such as the police cadets and sea cadets.

Volunteers from the police cadets helped at the evening, running programmes on the dangers of the internet.

by Rod Kitson

THE Woolwich Ferry is more used to travelling across the Thames than sailing down it.

But to mark its 50th year, the ferry brought back a tradition that had been forgotten for almost a decade, and took 200 disadvantaged youngsters west to London Bridge.

Children from care homes, hospices and schools climbed aboard the John Burns with their carers and parents on July 27. Assistant operations manager Paul Buckingham told GT: "We went up through Tower Bridge – which was opened up for us, and then to London Bridge, but the boat is too tall to pass under that one."

"The kids loved it, they all had big smiles on their faces. We were worried the weather was going to scupper it, but we got away with that one."

DECKED OUT: some of the 350 passengers on board for voyage

There was a disco on board, and a tuck shop and food for the four-hour voyage.

"The boat gets up to six or seven knots, so we have to work our way through the other traffic," said Paul, who was one of 10 staff who work on the boats gave up their time for free.

Many short-journey ferries are pulled by chains, but the Thames presents problems that means the Woolwich Ferry travels under its own steam.

"Because of the strong tides our boats are motor driven," the boatman said.

Paul has worked the ferry for 26 years, after his granddad and his dad. His son is the fourth generation to be employed on the ferry.

"There's a lot of history here," he said, "and lots of families who've worked on it."

Two ferries operate the free service from the John Wilson Street roundabout to Pier Road in Newham on the north bank. A third ferry remains in reserve for any breakdowns. They are all named after historic trade union leaders: John Burns, Ernest Bevin and James Newman.

The free service runs from each side every 10 minutes, transporting 250 cars and lorries across the river every hour – more than 1700 every day.

...and it's Ahoy to milestone for sailing charity

WATERSPORTS charity AHoy has celebrated its 10th anniversary - after a hugely successful year for the team, writes Simon Banks.

The centre in Deptford has been named charity of the year by insurance firm Agencyport, and chair of trustees, Clive Ongley was awarded an MBE.

It has also witnessed a new buzz from youngsters keen to get on the water after last summer's Olympic Games.

Trustee and senior instructor, Liz Chowiecnyk told GT: "The work everyone has done here in the last few years has been phenomenal, we have really been able to provide the young people here with a unique experience that they have really enjoyed and learned from."

The riverfront charity on Borthwick Street has helped 800

unemployed youths get work in the last two years. It also works with youngsters with disabilities, teaching them water skills, and people skills.

"We have young rowers and sailors who have described their time at AHoy as the best of their life and it really makes our work worthwhile," Liz said.

The facility was able to expand its infrastructure with a new two-storey building for education, with a state of the art rowing gym and a computer room. The centre has also been able to develop its 'Shipmate' scheme, encouraging enthusiastic and skilled young rowers and sailors to take their skills further and train to be instructors.

AHoy saw over seven thousand sessions take place last year and an increase in the number of local school visits to the centre. More groups of young people have also taken part in a Channel row challenge from Dover to Calais. Twenty-four youngsters from the centre are in training for the event. The centre hopes to grow by 20 per cent and expand the building further and develop the employment scheme in the future.

Greenwich Time asked readers to send in pictures of the London Games

The story of our

ONE year on from London's role in the greatest show on earth, GT readers have shared their memories of the Olympics.

Kellie Omer's picture of the wheelchair basketball at The O2, (right), was among more than 20 terrific photographs she sent in. She said: "My family and I went to three different events and I did the Mayor's mascot trail, so as you can imagine I have hundreds of pictures!"

The 34-year-old added: "Being a Greenwich resident and having the Olympics on our door step was such a positive experience for both of my daughters."

"Seeing the diversity of contestants, amazing and unbelievable abilities and achievements in the Paralympics showed them and inspired them that anything is possible if you want it bad enough."

Patrick Ayling, who lives on Tunnel Avenue, captured the hand-over of the Olympic torch relay, (bottom right), said: "It was impossible not to get excited and immersed in the amazing, uplifting energy that poured from every TV, radio and person. Even the most cynical of people could not help but be positive and excited. Bringing people together was the most important legacy of all for us, making new friends with neighbours that had previously only been passing acquaintances."

"Seeing children acting out mini Olympics is a real joy, even for those who do not even consider themselves sports fans."

Fiona Taylor, (far right), was in the Olympic Stadium for the final stages of the Paralympics.

She captured the artful and quirky image of the three judges by the sandpit. Fiona told GT: "I love the expression on the face of the younger judge."

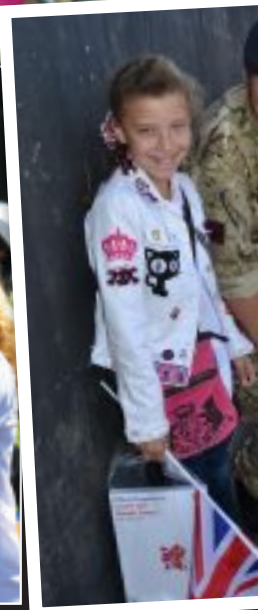

"For me 2012 was all about the anticipation and the excitement that both games brought. From the torch relays to the victory parade I was hooked."

"I nearly lost my voice screaming at the television when Mo Farah, David Weir and Jess Ennis were competing. What a memorable summer - I didn't want it to end."

The Olympics weren't the only thing to come back to London last summer, Fiona, from Eltham, added.

"My sister was born in Woolwich before moving to America - but she came home for the Olympics."

SKY SCENE: The Night

to Heaven by Stephen Banks

Things are looking up

THE late astronomer Sir Patrick Moore has had a photography award named in his honour.

The Royal Observatory has announced the shortlist for its annual Astronomy Photographer of the Year competition, and has renamed the Best Newcomer gong in memory of the star-gazer who died in December last year.

The presenter of the BBC's The Sky at Night had appeared as a judge for the global photography competition.

Winners of the competition will be chosen on September 18, before going on display at the observatory in Greenwich Park from September 19.

Entries this year include a waning crescent moon over Yosemite National Park, star formations in distant galaxies behind astral clouds of rose-coloured gas, and the supernatural glow of a cloud illuminating the Peak District in the dead of night.

The Royal Observatory – now part of the trio of Royal Museums Greenwich – received more than 1,200 submissions from all over the globe into an online Flickr group (www.flickr.com/groups/astrophoto).

The competition's judges include space scientist and TV presenter Dr Maggie Aderin-Pocock, Editor of Sky at Night Magazine Chris Bramley and the Royal Observatory's public astronomer Dr Marek Kukula. The awards ceremony can be followed live on Twitter #astrophoto2013..

Winners will be chosen in four categories, netting a £500 prize for each, with a £1,500 reward for the overall winner.

'Earth and Space' includes entries of landscapes and the night sky. 'Our Solar System' is for photos of the sun and its family of planets, moons and asteroids.

The 'Deep Space' category is for far off pics from galaxies beyond our solar system, and 'Young Astronomy Photographer of the Year' is for under 16s. The judges also award prizes in three special categories, including the Sir Patrick Moore Prize for Best Newcomer.

Walkie talkies

Greenwich Park hosts an environmental art project

GETTING DOWN TO THE MUSIC: revellers take part in park

AN interactive theatre walk gets an open-airing at Greenwich Park later this month.

Walking Stories is a choreographed audio ramble that goes off piste in the park on August 16 and 17 courtesy of Greenwich Dance.

It's inviting local people to explore and experience the park in a new way with immersive, 'site-specific' theatre. Audience members will be given an mp3 player and headphones to provide an original soundtrack. Walking Stories is part of the large-scale touring project Cycle Stories, an environmental art campaign designed by choreographer Charlotte Spencer.

The tour travels around Britain stopping off at different parks and open spaces, to create different projects including Walking Stories.

Charlotte Spencer said: "With six of us and our bikes fully loaded with panniers, trailer, and sound system we are certainly visible and audible. Many people stop to wave, smile, dance as we pass by. Invariably when we stop for a breather or to check the map, a group of people have expressed curiosity and approached us. An initial technical question about touring bikes very easily moves into a conversation about Cycle Stories and Walking Stories!"

There are two sessions on August 16, at 1pm and 6pm, and the following day there are four. Tickets are £8/7. More info and book on 020 8293 9741 or at www.greenwichdance.org.uk

FUNNYMAN: Howard previewed material at Up the Creek

Howard's way with a joke!

RUSSELL HOWARD previewed material from his upcoming world tour as a secret guest at Greenwich's Up the Creek.

It was the first time the Mock the Week comic had aired jokes from the Wonderbox arena tour, which begins in February and takes in four nights at the Albert Hall in April.

Working from notes at the Creek Road venue on July 28, the stand-up's gags shot from a similar stadium-filling canon as Michael McIntyre, arguably the only comic in Britain who can command a larger audience.

Comedy purists might have balked at Howard's admittance that he had penned none of the material before announcing the tour in May, preferring, like McIntyre, to rely on an easy rapport with the crowd and observational, situation jokes rather than an overarching theme.

If any thread were to be elicited from the try-out, it was a reliance on animals and fame.

Most successful was a gag which married the two – a skit on walking the dog which ended with Howard cleaning up the pavement mess with the only thing he had in his pocket – a £10 note.

But it was an impression of an African lion freezing at a Swedish zoo which stole the show, though it may be sanitised if his all-pleasing persona is to remain in tact.

Whether the material is alternative or edgy enough won't worry the West Country comic's fan-base. He is an affable character, grounded and self-deprecating, particularly on the subject of his lazy eye.

"I was a great footballer," he quipped, "because when I had the ball no-one knew which way I was going to go."

Also on the Sunday Special bill was BBC comic Stephen K Amos, testing material for his upcoming Edinburgh Fringe appearance. Deriding the Beeb's selection process and Howard's astronomic rise (he has been signed up for an eighth series of BBC3's Russell Howard's Good News, and sold more than 300,000 tickets for the Right Here Right Now tour in 2011), Amos joked: "Because of the BBC's diversity policy, I have to wait for Lenny Henry to die before I get another series."

The show was kicked off by poor man's Alan Partridge, John Robins – also trying out jokes before heading to Edinburgh. He was roundly outclassed by two comics at the top of their game, and was only saved by the taciturn Sunday night audience. Had this been a booze-lubricated Friday or a Saturday he would surely have been sent for an early bath.

The comedy club – which helped launch the careers of Vic and Bob, Jo Brand and Jimmy Carr, is a favoured venue among big stars wishing to try out new material anonymously.

Owner John McGirr said: "They like coming here because they know we will not let the cat out of the bag or advertise the shows."

1. NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the Council of the Royal Borough of Greenwich intends to make an Order to accommodate high voltage joint works carried out by UK Power Networks in Red Lion Lane. The effect of the Order would be to temporarily:
 - (a) prohibit vehicles from entering, exiting, proceeding or waiting (including waiting for the purposes of loading or unloading) in Red Lion Lane, between Nos. 116A Red Lion Lane and No. 114 Red Lion Lane; and
 - (b) suspend the one way working in Red Lion Lane, between the northern kerb-line of Shoppers Hill and the south-western kerb-line of Constitution Rise.
2. The above restrictions would only apply at such times and to such extent as shall be indicated by the placing of the appropriate traffic signs. Vehicular access to properties affected by these measures will be maintained whenever possible.
3. Whilst the closure is in operation, the alternative route for vehicles would be via Constitution Rise.
4. The Order would come into force on 6th September 2013 and would continue in force for up to 18 months, or until the works have been completed, whichever is the sooner. However, it is expected that the works will be complete by 10th September 2013.
5. Queries concerning these works should be directed to the Royal Borough of Greenwich's Directorate of Regeneration, Enterprise & Skills on 020 8921 5474.

Royal Borough of Greenwich's Choice Based Lettings Scheme

Edition 35 I

BIDDING FOR PROPERTIES

We are always looking to improve the service we provide.
We have now made some changes to the way we advertise properties.

People on the Housing register are able to bid for all properties, regardless of their banding. You must be eligible for the size of property and bids will be considered in the following order:

First Band A, followed by Band B both in priority date order.
Those in Band C will then be considered in registration date order.

Please note that there will still be some properties with age restrictions so only people of this age group can apply for these.

BAND

- A is for applicants in unsatisfactory housing, including people moving due to demolition and those underoccupying their homes.
- B is for applicants the Royal Borough of Greenwich must prioritise according to the law, particularly homeless people, and others with an urgent need to move for medical or welfare reasons.
- C is for all applicants on the housing register, including those that are in priority bands A and B.

How do I apply?

Get on the list

First, you've got to be on the housing waiting list to join the scheme.
If you're not, register an application on line at www.royalgreenwich.gov.uk

Find your applicant number

It will be on the letter you've already had from the Royal Borough of Greenwich about the new scheme. You'll need that number and the reference number of the property you're after, which will be on the advert.

Pick out your ideal property

by looking in Greenwich Time or regularly checking the website:

www.royalgreenwich.gov.uk/homes

Click on your preference on the website. If you don't have a computer, you can always use one for free at either The Eltham or Woolwich Centre or a local library.

Apply in one of two ways

- Phone the 24-hour hotline 020 8921 4340. It's an automatic push-button system and calls will be charged at the normal local rate, or

Green Flag for wildlife wetland

A BEAUTYSPOT that nurtures local wildlife has won a Green Flag award.

Greenwich Ecology Park won the accolade hard on the heels that 15 Green Flags have been awarded to the borough's parks.

Keep Britain Tidy, which organises the awards, described it as one of the very best open spaces in the UK. A Green Flag flying overhead is a sign to visitors that the space boasts the highest possible standards, is beautifully maintained and has excellent facilities.

Senior warden Joanne Smith said: "We are thrilled to receive a Green Flag award for the first time. This award recognises and highlights that people in Greenwich are benefitting from a green space of the very highest quality. The park is a hidden gem on the Greenwich Peninsula, providing vital space for wildlife as well as a peaceful oasis for people to enjoy."

The Ecology Park, which opened to the public in 2002, is a four-acre wetland area

FLAGGING UP THEIR SUCCESS: Ecology park volunteers hoist the flag to celebrate the award managed by conservation volunteers. Habitats include woodland, marsh, meadow, lakes and streams. The park is open to the public Wednesday to Sunday, from 10am to dusk. Entrance is free and there is full disabled access.

The England legend who saved the day

by Joshua Statter

It isn't very often that an ordinary 14-year-old in Greenwich gets to meet England's most capped player.

Every football fan, no matter how old, dreams of meeting their hero, so when I heard Peter Shilton was coming to my school, I was counting the days until he arrived.

He was invited to Woolwich Poly to present the annual sports awards.

But before he took to the rostrum, Shilton, an OBE who played for England a record 125 times, hosted a penalty shoot-out. I was one of the first to be knocked out, but I got to conduct a Q&A session with him later, which more than made up for it. I made sure I was well prepared...and looking my best!

During the day, he signed papers, shirts, footballs, gloves and even a handbag. He posed for countless photos, and then went on to tell us about his career.

Footballers can be big-headed and spoilt, but Shilton, 63, was a friendly man who showed great humility.

At last the sports awards came, and everyone received their prizes. Then it was time for Maradona's arch enemy to make his speech - in front of 600 engrossed people. His talk, of course centred around the 'Hand of God', when England were knocked out of the 1986 World Cup after the little Argentine beat Shilton to the ball and punched it into an open net - later claiming it was divine intervention.

The veteran goalie spoke candidly and philosophically about the incident - and about playing the game fairly. It was an inspirational moment, and I will remember him not only for his amazing ability as a goalkeeper, but as a kind, friendly man willing to have a chat with ordinary students.

Tender for:

The Provision of Help to Live at Home Service (Domiciliary Care Services) to Royal Borough of Greenwich. Ref: SPS 0882

The Directorate of Adult and Older People's Services, Royal Borough of Greenwich is letting a framework agreement for the provision of a new Help to Live at Home service for Greenwich residents. The new service has been redesigned with the help of service users and current home care providers, and will be strongly focused on keeping residents well and supporting them to live independently in their own homes for as long as they wish.

New service providers will work closely with Adult Social Care, Primary Health, the third and voluntary sector and other public services and will play a key role in promoting the health and wellbeing of service users, as well as providing a range of traditional care support services in the person's home.

The new contracts will be let in four blocks, each relating to one of four roughly equal geographical areas and similar activity levels, with a 'lead' and 'back up' provider selected in each area. In addition, the Council wishes to appoint a range of specialist care providers who will support people with complex needs across all four areas.

General Help to Live at Home (Lot 1)

The Council will appoint lead and back up providers who will be responsible for providing the significant majority of Help to Live at Home Services in the relevant part, or parts, of the Borough via block contract with guaranteed minimum hours. These services will comprise traditional domiciliary care including personal care, live in care and support to look after the home, but will also include an important role in promoting the independence and wellbeing of the individual, helping to ensure that they are not isolated or lonely and that they are supported to remain as active as possible and maintain social networks and friends.

The Council is seeking a range of providers who can demonstrate a strong track record in the provision of home care services and are suitably registered with the Care Quality Commission.

Specialist Help to live at Home (Lot 2)

The specialist services will be procured through a call-off from the framework agreement and will support residents who have complex needs including severe disability, challenging behaviour, severe sensory loss or impairment, dual diagnosis (e.g. mental health with harmful use of drugs or alcohol) or multiple co-morbidities. They will work across the whole Borough.

The Council is seeking a range of providers who can demonstrate a track record in the provision of specialist home care services and are suitably registered with the Care Quality Commission.

The framework agreement will be for four years and will commence in April 2014. The contract value is circa £10m pa.

The framework agreement will have a strong outcome focus and all providers will need to demonstrate that their services are delivering the personal outcomes set out in the person's support plan.

Organisations wishing to express their interest in providing this service should write to: shaun.fortune@royalgreenwich.gov.uk or william.jabang@royalgreenwich.gov.uk.

A Pre-Qualification Questionnaire will be issued to all persons expressing an interest from Wednesday 14 August 2013.

The closing date for expressions of interest is 21 August 2013.

Completed Questionnaires must be returned to the above address by no later than Noon on Wednesday 18 September 2013.

Charlton plan remembrance room and new disabled facilities

BARTRAM WATCHES ON:
the memorial room would be behind the statue of the Charlton keeper

Athletic addition

CHARLTON Athletic have revealed plans to establish a memorial facility at The Valley, and to improve views for disabled fans.

The remembrance room, earmarked for the space between the Bartram's bar entrance and the main reception - would house a book of remembrance, a stone memorial to recognise those connected with the club who have been killed in action, and a plaque to honour past players.

Plans for the space have been submitted to the council's planning board, and a decision is expected before the end of the month. If the space gets the green light, supporters will be able pay a set fee of £30 for an entry to be put in the book of remembrance that will include the name of the deceased and the year of death.

The room - approximately 12 ft by 10 ft - would also contain a 'quiet area' for people who wish to pay respects.

Supporters are being given the chance to submit entries until August 31 for those who have passed away on any date and in any year.

Meanwhile, students from Greenwich University teamed up with Charlton Athletic Community Trust to come up with ideas to improve the disabled facilities in the south stand, and for a new area on Valley Grove.

Senior university lecturer Christine Gausden said: "It gave our students the chance to test all the skills and competencies they have acquired to date including technical and legislative knowledge, site logistics, commercial awareness, costs and programming and presentation skills."

CAFC head of operations, Mick Everett added: "The quality of submissions was very high and the students have given us a range of innovative ideas that we will be pursuing with Royal Greenwich and the Thames Water Authority."

There are also plans to build a multi-use games area on the Valley Grove site. He said: "We have Premier League funding in place and to improve the car parking surface and layout but the ideas presented have made us re-think our original plans.

"In terms of disabled seating there has been a problem for a long time with the current disabled seating layout in the south stand. Because the seating is sited in the middle of the stand disabled supporters views are obscured by away supporters standing up in front of them."
